

A Marathon For Everyone In Brooklyn

Athletes on foot and on wheels participate in the second annual Achilles Marathon yesterday in Brooklyn's Prospect Park. The race is intended to encourage disabled athletes to participate with able-bodied marathoners. It also is a fund-raising venue for nonprofit organizations. Above left, competitors in the wheelchair division make their way around the 26.2-mile course. Above right, runners get ready for their marathon. Bogdan Krol, right, holds his medal after winning the wheelchair portion of the marathon, followed by Ken Archer, who finished in second place.

Newsday, April 29, 2002